

Self Storage...See Fast Savings

Often, self storage units seem quite pricey to me. I mean, I sometimes think, "why save all of that stuff in the first place?" Conversely, self storage can actually save a business owner quite a bit of money, especially in moving and refurbishing a workplace.

Consider this...you own a business that is either moving to another place or opening up a new branch. All of that office furniture could be sold, and new could be purchased, or a reasonable amount of money could be spend to utilize self storage during the move. Did you know that the average cost of an office cubicle is over one thousand dollars? A self storage unit can be leased for several months for the price of one new cube. If each employee got a new cubicle, it would amount to tens of thousands of dollars for an average sized office. It would have only cost a few hundred dollars to store your office furniture in a self storage unit for a few months and reuse it at the completion of your move.

Another situation in which a self storage unit would be helpful is in making bulk purchases. Maybe one or two cubicles would cost one thousand dollars a piece if purchase individually, but when purchased in larger lots, they may cost significantly less. If you knew, for example, that you would be opening a new branch in another city in a few months time, you could purchase many cubes and store the unneeded ones in a self storage unit for a few months, and still have saved a good amount of money in the long run by purchasing the furniture in bulk.

There is a quite a bit of savings to be had in using self storage units. There are a multitude of ways in which creative business owners can put self storage to use. If used inventively, self storage can save you thousands of dollars over purchasing new goods. Also, they can aide a business in saving money by permitting you to purchase goods in bulk and store the unused portion until they are needed.
